

Free Emergency Preparedness Training

What is it?

In partnership with the State of New York, trained Red Cross staff and volunteers are providing Governor Andrew Cuomo's Citizen Preparedness Corps training to local residents. This training provides the knowledge and tools to prepare for emergencies and disasters, respond accordingly, and recover as quickly as possible. It is suitable for seniors, adults, and young adults (middle school age and above).

A representative from the American Red Cross will present the 1 hour training at a date, time and venue set up at least 3 weeks in advance. Presentations are available for any size audience and can be hosted in almost any setting (auditorium, classroom, meeting room, etc.)

To Schedule an In-Person Presentation:

1. Visit nyredcross.org and select the menu option "Get Prepared"
2. Click on "Preparedness Training In-Person Request"
3. Complete the form and click "Submit." A member of the community preparedness team will contact you shortly after your form is submitted to discuss setting up your training.

Online

Complete the online training in approximately 12-15 minutes.

1. Create an Account and Password:
Visit prepare.ny.gov/online-citizen-preparedness-training to create an account and password. You will then be directed to the online preparedness training registration form.
2. Complete the training registration form. When you are asked "where did you learn about the online Citizen Preparedness Training?" Please select "Referred by the American Red Cross."
3. Take the online training. At the end of the training you will test your skills with a brief quiz. Earn a certificate when you successfully answer the majority of questions correctly.
4. Network! Encourage as many people as possible to also take the training. Remember to have them also select "Referred by the American Red Cross."
